

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A golf bag includes a light-weight frame structure and a collapsible bag disposed within an inner space of the frame structure. The frame structure carries golf clubs in a directly exposed presentation, which protects the golf clubs from contacting one another and provides convenience for golf club selection. The collapsible bag is placed within the frame structure in a fully expanded condition and the contents therein are completely accessible through the open front the frame structure. The bag is completely removable from the frame structure, which provides a golfer with the option of leaving the bag with its contents while taking the light frame structure with the golf clubs carried therein, over a distance to the vicinity of a particular shot.